Kristen A. Feemster M.D., M.P.H., M.S.H.P.R.

Assistant Professor of Pediatrics, Perelman School of Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania

Attending Physician, Division of Infectious Diseases at the Children's Hospital of Philadelphia

Kristen A. Feemster, M.D., M.P.H., M.S.H.P.R. is an Assistant Professor of Pediatrics in the Division of Infectious Diseases at the Children's Hospital of Philadelphia (CHOP) and the Perelman School of Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania (UPenn). Dr. Feemster completed her undergraduate work at Yale University and received her M.D. and an M.P.H. in Population and Family Health from Columbia University Schools of Medicine and Public Health in New York City. She completed pediatric residency at CHOP then pursued a dual fellowship training program in health services research and pediatric infectious diseases: She was a fellow in the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation (RWJF) Clinical Scholars Program at UPenn, completing a Master of Science degree in Health Policy Research then returned to CHOP for pediatric infectious diseases training. She joined the faculty in her current position in 2010. She currently resides in Philadelphia with her husband and two young children.

Dr. Feemster's ongoing work includes vaccine acceptance among parents and immunization providers in Botswana and the Dominican Republic, interventions to improve Tdap vaccination among caregivers of young infants, neighborhood factors associated with the incidence of respiratory infections, and health-care associated respiratory infection in the pediatric ambulatory setting. She is a regular contributor to the Philadelphia Inquirer public health blog and an advisory board member for Parents with Kids of Infectious Diseases (PKIDS). She also serves on the Advisory Commission for Childhood Vaccines that advises the National Vaccine Injury Compensation Program.
