

Idaho Medicaid asked the states of Utah and Oregon, both of which have 20 or more years of managed care experience in their Medicaid programs, to talk to Idaho legislators in November about the evolution of their managed care efforts. Representatives from both states shared their successes and lessons learned through their experiences.

Jean Phillips, Deputy Director for the Oregon Health Authority and former Idaho Medicaid Administrator, provided our western neighbor's perspective. Gail Rapp, Assistant Division Director for Utah's Division of Medicaid and Health Financing, provided Utah's experience.

Both presentations are available below. Idaho sincerely thanks both states for very informative and thoughtful presentations that will help our state develop managed care opportunities to improve care, patient access and health outcomes for Idaho Medicaid participants.
